Section AAnswer Question 01.

Source A

From a television address given by John F Kennedy to the American nation, 22 October 1962.

Within the past week, unmistakable evidence has established the fact that a series of offensive missile sites is now in preparation on Cuba. The purpose of these bases can be none other than to provide a nuclear strike capability against the western hemisphere. This rapid transformation of Cuba into an important strategic base constitutes an explicit threat to the peace and security of all the Americas. Neither the United States of America nor the world community of nations can tolerate deliberate deception and offensive threats. Nuclear weapons are so destructive and ballistic missiles are so swift, that any substantially increased possibility of their use or any sudden change in their deployment may well be regarded as a threat to peace. 5

Source B

From the memoirs of Nikita Khrushchev, written after he was removed from power in 1964 and published in the West in 1970.

The fate of Cuba and the maintenance of Soviet prestige preoccupied me. We had to establish an effective deterrent to American interference in the Caribbean region. But what exactly? The logical answer was missiles. We knew that American missiles were aimed against us in Turkey, and also in West Germany.

I had the idea of installing missiles with nuclear warheads in Cuba without letting the US find out that they were there until it was too late to do anything about them. 5

I want to make one thing absolutely clear; when we put our ballistic missiles in Cuba, we had no desire to start a war. On the contrary, our principal aim was to deter America from starting a war.

- 0 1 With reference to these sources and your understanding of the historical context, which of these two sources is more valuable in explaining the crisis over Cuba in 1962?
