NIKOLAI GOGOL: The Government Inspector

4 Read this extract, and then answer the question that follows it:

Mayor:	Your Excellency, allow me to introduce my wife, and my daughter.
Khlestakov	[bowing]: I am overjoyed, Madame, to enjoy ... so to speak ... the pleasure of your company.
Anna Andreevna:	Our pleasure is the greater, to have such a distinguished guest.	5
Khlestakov	[posturing]: Permit me to insist, Madame, that the pleasure is entirely mine.
Anna Andreevna:	Really sir, you're such a flatterer. Won't you please be seated?
Khlestakov:	Merely to stand beside you is already a delight, Madame, but if you absolutely insist, I shall sit. [Sits.] What contentment to be seated at your fair side.	10
Anna Andreevna:	But no, no, you cannot really intend such words for my ears. For one used to life in St Petersburg, such peregrination must be most disagreeable.	15
Khlestakov:	Odious in the extreme, Madame. Accustomed to life as one is, comprenez-vous , in the haut monde , to suddenly find oneself en route : dirty inns, a cultural desert ... I must admit, if it hadn't been for this happy occasion, which [glancing at ANNA ANDREEVNA and posturing] ... makes it worthwhile ...	20
Anna Andreevna:	Indeed, it must be most disagreeable for you.
Khlestakov:	At this moment, madame, I find it the opposite of disagreeable.
Anna Andreevna:	Oh sir! You flatter me, I'm sure.
Khlestakov:	And what more fitting object could one find for flattery?
Anna Andreevna:	But I am a country person.	25
Khlestakov:	Ah! The country, to be sure, has its little ... hills and valleys. But it's true one can't compare it with St Petersburg! Ah, St Petersburg! That's the life! You may think that I'm just a copy clerk, but in fact the head of my department and I are as thick as thieves. He'll clap me on the shoulder, just like that, and say: 'Come round to dinner, old sport!' I only poke my head into the office for two minutes at a time to say: 'do this, do that!' and the copy clerk, such a rat, scratches away, tr, tr ... They even wanted to make me a collegiate assessor, but, I thought, 'what's the use?'—and turned the promotion down. And the porter's forever chasing after me with his brush: 'Allow me, sir, I'll just give your boots a shine.' [To the MAYOR.] Why are you all standing, gentlemen? Do please sit!	30
[Together]	<table border="0" style="border-left: 1px solid black; border-right: 1px solid black; padding-left: 10px;"> <tr> <td style="padding-right: 10px;">{</td> <td>Mayor: We know our place. {	Mayor : We know our place. Your Excellency.
{	Warden of Charities : We'd rather stand.	40
{	Inspector of Schools : Please don't trouble yourself.
Khlestakov:	Oh for heaven's sake, sit down. [MAYOR and others all sit.] I don't hold with standing on ceremony. On the contrary: I always go out of my way to be inconspicuous. But it's impossible, quite impossible! As soon as I turn the corner they all start saying: 'Look: it's Ivan Alexandrovich!' Do you know, once they took	45

- me for the Commander-in-Chief. The soldiers all came rushing out of their guardroom and presented arms. And afterwards their officer—who's a close friend of mine—said to me: 'You know, old chap, we were all quite sure you were the C-in-C!' 50
- Anna Andreevna:* Good heavens, who would have thought it!
- Khlestakov:* Oh yes, I'm known all round. I know all the pretty actresses, of course. I write the odd little vaudeville for them, you know. Yes, I know a lot of literary types too. Pushkin and I are great chums. I bump into him every so often: 'How's it going, Push, old boy?' I say. 'Middling, old chap,' he says, 'fair to middling.' Old Pushkin's quite a wag, I can tell you. 55
- Anna Andreevna:* So you're a writer too? How wonderful to be so talented! Do you write for the magazines?
- Khlestakov:* Oh yes, I do a bit for the magazines. But then I've knocked off so many things: The Marriage of Figaro, Robert le Diable, Norma. I can't even remember what half of them are called. It happened quite by chance, actually. Those blasted theatre managers were always after me: 'Do please write us something, old fellow.' So I thought, 'What the hell: I'll give it a try.' Do you know, I sat down that very same evening and wrote the lot. Astounded them all. Yes, well, I've always had a great facility for thought. All that stuff by Baron Brambeus, The Frigate of Hope, Moscow Telegraph ... They're all mine really. 60
